What if a bill collector bothers you after getting your letter?

Write down the dates they call and what they say. Also, save any papers they send you and take them to a lawyer.

Or, you can stop just their calls to you at work.

You must tell them in writing not to call you at work. Your letter must say your boss doesn’t let you take these phone calls at work.

You may be able to sue the bill collector for money.

The Fair Debt Collection Practices Act gives you many other rights. It says bill collectors must treat you fairly and tell the truth. Do you think a bill collector has treated you badly? He or she may have broken the law.

The bill collector may have to pay you money. He or she may also have to pay for your lawyer.

If you think the bill collector broke the law, see a lawyer.

If you cannot afford to pay a lawyer, call your local Legal Aid office. They may be able to help.

BILLCOLLECTORS
BUGGING YOU

www.laet.org

You do have rights!
The law gives you rights when a bill collector tries to make you pay a debt.

This law is called the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. It tells bill collection agencies what they may not do to collect money from you.

Does this law help you?
Has a debt you owe been turned over to a collection agency? Then this law helps you. What if the company you owe money to tries to collect from you themselves? Then, usually, this law cannot help you.

It’s against the law for bill collectors to lie or mislead you.

It’s against the law for bill collectors to do any of these things:
- Make you think they are someone else (like a lawyer or a deputy sheriff).
- Say you will be arrested or put in jail for a debt.
- Lie to you when collecting a debt.
- Tell you they are going to garnish your wages or take your property (unless they have a legal right to do that).
- Tell you they are going to garnish your Social Security check.

It’s against the law for bill collectors to threaten or pester you.

The law says bill collectors may not:
- Threaten to hurt a person.
- Use dirty or bad language.
- Call many times a day.
- Call before 8:00 a.m. or after 9:00 p.m. (This is against the law unless they know those times are better for you).
- Call over and over to bother you, or anyone else about your debt.
- Threaten or abuse anyone else about your debt.

How to stop bill collectors from bothering you

You can stop all calls and letters.

You can tell bill collectors not to contact you, your boss, your relatives, or anyone else.

To do this, you must write to the bill collectors. You can’t just tell them over the phone.

The following is a form letter you can write to the bill collectors:

Debt Collector Name: _________________
Address: _____________________________
____________________________________
Account No.: _________________________

Dear Sir/Madam:

Pursuant to the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act, I am requesting that you cease all further communication with me, in any form about this alleged debt. Also, do not contact any other person about this alleged debt.

Sincerely,

Name_______________________________
Date ________________________________

Keep a copy of the letter. If you can, it’s a good idea to send the letter by certified mail.

Want to write your own letter instead of using ours?
Tell the bill collector to stop contacting you or anyone else about this debt. Say this is your right under the Fair Debt Collection Practices Act. Does anyone in your home have health problems? Do the phone calls or letters make them worse? Then say that in the letter, too.

What happens when the bill collector gets your letter?
They can contact you again only to say if they plan to take you to court.
